International Services/ Leadership

- Honorary President of the Egyptian Association for Communication Sciences and Linguistics (EACSL). For unlimited support and contributions over the years. Dr. Al-Dakroury has supported EACSL through his volunteered contributions and determination to help young Egyptian and Arab professionals by guiding the EACSL since its foundation, helping it grow and play a more effective role by raising the standards for Speech-Language Pathology in Egypt and other Middle Eastern countries. Dr. Al-Dakroury initiated and organized a series of high-standard professional development activities and scientific events. In the summer of 2017 as the first-ever ASHA-accredited program (3.75 ASHA CEUs) to be held in EGYPT (Dr. Wael was the program director). During the COVID-19 pandemic, Dr. Al-Dakroury helped EACSL to organize an international online seminar with speakers from three different continents that were also ASHA accredited for 1.5 ASHA CEUs (Dr. Wael was the program director). The attendees were from eleven different countries. Furthermore, Dr. Wael initiated a program “The Speech-Language Pathology International Program (SLPIP)” that is under his leadership, this innovative educational initiative breaks the mold of traditional programs. SLPIP offered a year-long program (August 2024 – July 2025) in cooperation with 12 professors from 12 different countries. Link: <https://eacsl.net/>
- Member of the Child Language Committee of the International Association of Communication Sciences and Disorders (IALP), 2024-2027, Renewable for another three-year period. The committee includes some of the most prominent leaders worldwide in child language. This prestigious global organization serves as an international network of professionals and researchers in speech-language pathology, swallowing disorders, and audiology. Since its establishment in 1924, the International Association of Communication Sciences and Disorders (IALP) has aimed to promote collaboration among specialists in these fields across the globe. Today, IALP represents a global network of over 300,000 professionals, including speech-language pathologists, audiologists, clinical linguists, and ENT specialists, from more than 40 countries. I am honored to contribute to the association’s mission of advancing knowledge and practices in communication sciences and disorders and to be part of and lead current and future Mega Projects and Initiatives worldwide (i.e., the Global TALES protocol for eliciting personal narrative skills in children using 6 emotion-based prompts. It was initially piloted with 10-year-old children from 10 different countries speaking 8 different languages.) Link: <https://ialp-org.com/child-language-2/>
